student BMJ

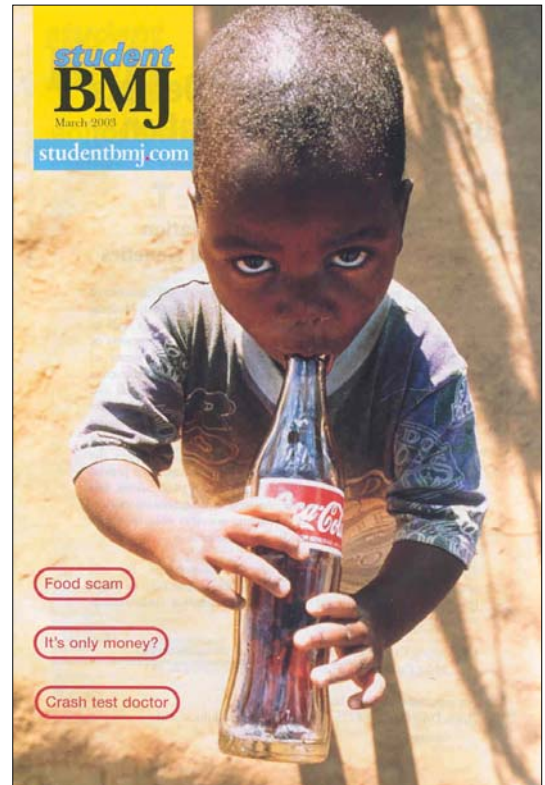

Written by medical students, for medical students studentBMJ is the only international monthly journal for medical students, written by medical students. It features:

- Important articles about all aspects of student life, including choosing electives, selecting a career path, and dealing with financial issues
- Papers to introduce the reader to the world of original scientific research
- News and editorials on current medical events
- Reviews of the latest medical books and CD ROMS
- Educational information not found in textbooks studentBMJ is circulated to 11,000 student members of the BMA, and a further 1,500 UK and overseas subscribers. As well as first to final year medical students studentBMJ is also read by prospective medical students and their parents, and careers officers within secondary schools.

studentBMJ was winner of the Student Magazine of the Year at the 2002 Guardian Student Media Awards
